10 次の文章を読んで、あとの各問に答えよ。

Peter and Fred were brothers. Each of them had a horse and rode it every day. Each of them said that his horse was (①) and could run faster than the other one. Sometimes the brothers argued, and their father was not happy about that.

One day their father showed them a letter and said, "When I die, read this." Soon after that he died, and the brothers read the letter. It said, "When I die, my two sons must ride to Black Hill. I give all my money to the son who has the horse that gets to Black Hill last. I give nothing to the son who has the horse that gets there first."

Some weeks later Peter and Fred started riding to Black Hill, but they rode very slowly. Each of them wanted the other to get to Black Hill first. When one of them got far in front of the other, he turned his horse and rode back. When the other saw this, he did the same. They never got near Black Hill.

One night, they came to a hotel. They got off their horses and went in. They looked very tired, and the man in the hotel said, "You look very tired. What's wrong with you?"

Peter and Fred told him about their horses and the money their father left. "So we can never (②)," said Peter. "Now we've been on the road for three months," said Fred. "We're still far away from Black Hill, and we'll never be able to get my father's money," said Peter. "We don't know what to do," said Peter and Fred.

The man went away to bring some food, but he soon came back. "Your long trip will end tomorrow, or even tonight," he said. "Change horses! Ride your brother's horse and (③)."
